Situation Overview

On 13 June 2024, a catastrophic landslide and subsequent flooding, triggered by incessant rain, have wreaked havoc across various districts of Koshi Province, with Taplejung district bearing the brunt of the disaster. The calamity has led to significant human loss and extensive damage to infrastructure.

According to the District Administrative Office, a total of 86 houses have been inundated, alongside numerous other structures. The relentless rainfall between June 4, 2024, and June 18, 2024, has caused Taplejung to experience 21 separate incidents, including landslides, floods, and thunderbolts.

The financial impact of these events has been substantial, with estimated losses amounting to NPR 72 lakhs. Local authorities are working tirelessly to provide relief and support to the affected communities, but the scale of the disaster has posed significant challenges. Rescue operations were initiated with efforts concentrated on evacuating residents from the most severely impacted areas and providing immediate relief. The government has urged residents to stay vigilant and adhere to safety advisories as weather conditions remained unstable. This disaster highlights the urgent need for improved infrastructure and disaster preparedness in the region to mitigate the impact of such natural calamities in the future.
